

Last minute inspiration for Mother's Day

This Mother's Day, treat your mother to a variety of delectable dining options from Scotland's east to west coasts. Now that it is better weather maybe it is time to venture further afield?

The Edinburgh suggestions are first – but there are others in Glasgow and St Andrews below.

Here are some ideas of where to take that special person on Sunday 27 March 2022.

The Broughton, Edinburgh

Last but by no means least, it wouldn't be Mother's Day (or a Sunday) with the perfect roast. Give Mum a weekend off in the kitchen by visiting one of the Times top 30 places to dine on a Sunday, at the Broughton in Edinburgh.

Their famous roasts, are to die for with a choice of Roast Dry Aged Beef, Yorkshire pudding, duck fat roast potatoes, fine beans, glazed carrot and gravy or Rolled black pudding stuffed Ayrshire pork belly, apple sauce, glazed carrot, duck fat roast potatoes and gravy and for the vegetarians among us there's Roast butternut squash, toasted hazelnuts, feta, cavolo nero, spiced seed but once their gone it's gone.

There's even a Sunday night quiz every Sunday at 7.30pm (including Mother's Day) if your mum is up for a challenge.

The Register Club, Edinburgh

One of Edinburgh's finest bars has unveiled a treat for Mum this Mothers Day.

The Register Club, located on the 4th floor of Cheval The Edinburgh Grand, offers the conviviality of a drawing room, the sophistication of a gentleman's club, and a unique venue that elevates cocktails and conversation to an art form. Afternoon Tea at Cheval The Edinburgh Grand invites Mum to enjoy homemade scones and Scottish jam and sweet treats as well as a savory selection using the finest seasonal produce from artisan suppliers across Scotland. Mother's Day Afternoon Tea starts from £28pp, and Champagne Afternoon Tea, which includes a glass of Billecart-Salmon Brut Réserve, starts from £38pp.

Along with Afternoon Tea, the innovative spring cocktail menu features ten brand new creations crafted by drinks specialist and bartender Ruben Goncalves.
