

6 Best Side Hustles for College Students

Did you know that you can make good cash while still studying? These 6 best side hustles for college students demonstrate how you can make bucks while in college.

Introduction

While in college, you undoubtedly have a lot on your plate. You have to spend hours studying and preparing for exams, engage in extracurricular activities, and find time for some fun. So, having to work while in college may sound impractical, even impossible.

The truth is that you can actually work and make your own money while in college. After all, no college student has ever said that they had enough pocket money! And the best way you can make some extra cash while in college is to engage in one or more side hustles that won't take too much of your time.

Consider 6 best side hustles for college students that you can undertake:

Become a Freelancer

To become a freelancer, you need to be able to write good website content. Many best money-making apps allow users to offer their freelancing services, such as Upwork and Fiverr. You need to sign up for these services, apply for a project, set your rates, and start earning!

According to a 2020 research, freelancers in the United States earn an average of $20 per hour. So, yes, all you need is just an hour to become $20 rich! Indeed, freelancing is one of the most convenient side hustles college students can undertake, as it does not take too much of their time and money.

Start a Photography Business

Is photography your passion? Start a photography business in the nearby town or city as your part-time side hustle. You can start marketing yourself by advertising your services to schoolmates, teachers, and family members.

Also, you can sell your original photos to websites such as Shutterstock, Etsy, and Getty Images. These websites usually sell the original photos on behalf of photographers, then provide the owners with a good commission.

Offer Babysitting Services

Whether you attend a college in the city or in a rural, there will always be a great need for babysitters. So if you are the sort that loves being around children, offer babysitting services during your free time or when you are not too busy.

For example, you can set aside certain times of the day when you have no classes or during the weekends to watch over a child. You can also create a profile on babysitting websites, such as the Sitter City website, to advertise your business. In addition, you can create professional flyers and hand these out to students, teachers and friends; doing so would expose you to people and increase your chances of finding potential clients.

Deliver Food

Let's face it, all college students love takeout. And it's not just students who love such takeaway food but also professors, teachers, and other college workers. Therefore, one of the best side hustles you can undertake in college is to become a food delivery person.

If you have a car, consider becoming a driver for UberEats, DoorDash, GrubHub, or other similar apps. You can still use your bike to deliver food from restaurants to buyers and earn yourself a good commission while at it.

Become a Tutor

What are you currently pursuing at college? You can start making money from your course by offering tutoring services. For example, if you are pursuing Science, Math, or even a certain Language, offer to become a tutor and choose the rate you will charge per hour.

You can offer tutoring services to fellow college students flunking the subject. Also, you can talk to professors or parents that you know and offer these services to their kids. However, to become a good tutor, you will need to be well-versed with the subject and have a knack for teaching.

Offer Moving Services

In college, students and professors are constantly moving in and out. You can take advantage of this high college turnover by offering moving services. For example, partner with an already-established moving company and work with them to offer moving services. In addition, you could gather a group of friends in college and offer moving services together; this would give you better profits and capital.

Conclusion

As a college student, do not just settle for the pocket money you receive; try out some side hustles and start making your own cash. The 6 best side hustles for college students discussed in this article will make you some extra money and give you experience in the market and shape you into a successful business person!

Photo by Redd on Unsplash