

Boris Johnson quits as leader of the Conservative Party

A week is a long time in politics, and this has been a particularly eventful one. Finally on Thursday the Prime Minister, Boris Johnson, made a speech in Downing Street when he indicated that he will step down as leader of the Conservative Party.

After a gruelling day on Wednesday of will he, won't he, finally the Prime Minister decided to call it a day – at some point this year.

Almost 50 members of his Cabinet at all levels had resigned on Tuesday and Wednesday beginning with the notable resignations of Health Secretary Sajid Javid and Chancellor, Rishi Sunak. (Their resignation letters and the Prime Minister's response are below.) Both have since confirmed they will put themselves forward in the leadership contest. This will begin on Monday when the 1922 Committee sets out the timetable for choosing a new leader, and Prime Minister.

Mr Johnson did not use the word resign anywhere in the speech (reproduced in full below) delivered before an audience of faithful MPs and staff, and members of the press from the podium outside the house with the famous black door which he had fought so long to live in, but he is stepping down – although not immediately as Glenn Campbell Political Editor of the BBC reported.

The Secretary of State for Scotland, Alister Jack, was in Downing Street still supporting the Prime Minister. Nadim Zahawi was appointed the new Chancellor on Tuesday, along with Steve Barclay as Health Secretary and Michelle Donelan as Education Secretary. Ms Donelan quit the post on Thursday. Michael Gove was sacked on Wednesday evening as minister for levelling up and has said he will not stand as a candidate for Prime Minister.

No doubt matters will rumble on. Labour Leader Sir Keir Starmer has indicated he may ask for a vote of no confidence which might lead to a caretaker Prime Minister being put in place while the leadership contest runs.

In an effort to fill the gaps left in the government the Prime Minister made these appointments on Thursday:

- Rt Hon Greg Clark MP as Secretary of State for Levelling Up, Housing and Communities
- Rt Hon James Cleverly MP as Secretary of State for Education
- Rt Hon Sir Robert Buckland QC MP as Secretary of State for Wales
- Rt Hon Kit Malthouse MP as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster
- Shailesh Vara MP as Secretary of State for Northern Ireland
- Andrew Stephenson MP as Minister without Portfolio. He will attend Cabinet.
- Johnny Mercer MP as a Minister of State (Minister for Veterans' Affairs) at the Cabinet Office. He will attend Cabinet.
- Graham Stuart MP as a Minister of State at the Foreign, Commonwealth and Development Office
- Stephen McPartland MP as a Minister of State (Minister for Security) at the Home Office

- Tom Pursglove MP as a Minister of State jointly at the Home Office and the Ministry of Justice
- James Heapey MP as a Minister of State at the Ministry of Defence
- Will Quince MP as a Minister of State at the Department for Education
- Maria Caulfield MP as a Minister of State at the Department for Health and Social Care
- Paul Scully MP as a Minister of State at the Department for Levelling Up, Housing and Communities. He remains as Minister for London.
- Marcus Jones MP as a Minister of State at the Department for Levelling Up, Housing and Communities
- Matt Warman MP as a Minister of State at the Department for Digital, Culture, Media and Sport
- Trudy Harrison MP as a Minister of State at the Department for Transport
- Edward Timpson CBE MP as Solicitor General

TEXT of the Prime Minister's speech on 7 July 2022

Good afternoon everybody,

It is now clearly the will of the parliamentary conservative party that there should be a new leader of that party and therefore a new Prime Minister and I have agreed with Sir Graham Brady the chairman of our backbench MPs that the process of choosing that new leader should begin now and the timetable will be announced next week and I have today appointed a cabinet to serve – as I will – until a new leader is in place so I want to say to the millions of people who voted for us in 2019 – many of them voting Conservative for the first time thank you for that incredible mandate the biggest Conservative majority since 1987 the biggest share of the vote since 1979 and the reason I have fought so hard for the last few days to continue to deliver that mandate in person was not just because I wanted to do so but because I felt it was my job, my duty, my obligation to you to continue to do what we promised in 2019 and of course I am immensely proud of the achievements of this government from getting Brexit done and settling our relations with the continent after half a century reclaiming the power for this country to make its own laws in parliament getting us all through the pandemic delivering the fastest vaccine rollout in Europe the fastest exit from lockdown and in the last few months leading the west in standing up to Putin's aggression in Ukraine and let me say now to the people of Ukraine that I know that we in the UK will continue to back your fight for freedom for as long as it takes and at the same time in this country we have at the same time been pushing forward a vast programme of investment in infrastructure, skills and technology the biggest for a century because if I have one insight into human beings it is that genius and talent and enthusiasm and imagination are evenly distributed throughout the population but opportunity is not and that is why we need to keep levelling up keep unleashing the potential of every part of the United Kingdom and if we can do that in this country, we will be the most prosperous in Europe and in the last few days I have tried to persuade my colleagues that it would be eccentric to change governments when we are delivering so much and when we have such a vast mandate and when we are actually only a handful of points behind in the polls even in mid term after quite a few months of pretty unrelenting sledging and when the economic scene is so difficult domestically and internationally and I regret not to have been successful in those arguments and of course it is painful not to be able to see through so many ideas and projects myself but as we've seen at Westminster, the herd is powerful and when the herd moves, it moves and and my friends in politics no one is remotely indispensable

And our brilliant and Darwinian system will produce another leader equally committed to taking this country forward through tough times not just helping families to get through it but changing and improving our systems, cutting burdens on businesses and families and – yes – cutting taxes because that is the way to generate the growth and the income we need to pay for great public services and to that new leader I say, whoever he or she may be, I will give you as much support as I can and to you the British people I know that there will be many who are relieved but perhaps quite a few who will be disappointed and I want you to know how sad I am to give up the best job in the world but them's the breaks

I want to thank Carrie and our children, to all the members of my family who have had to put up with so much for so long

I want to thank the peerless British civil service for all the help and support that you have given our police, our emergency services and of course our NHS who at a critical moment helped to extend my own period in office as well as our armed services and our agencies that are so admired around the world and our indefatigable Conservative Party members and supporters whose selfless campaigning makes our democracy possible

I want to thank the wonderful staff here at Number Ten and of course at Chequers and our fantastic protection force detectives – the one group, by the way, who never leave and above all I want to thank you the British public for the immense privilege you have given me and I want you to know that from now until the new Prime Minister is in place, your interests will be served and the government of the country will be carried on

Being Prime Minister is an education in itself

I have travelled to every part of the United Kingdom and in addition to the beauty of our natural world I have found so many people possessed of such boundless British originality and so willing to tackle old problems in new ways that I know that even if things can sometimes seem dark now, our future together is golden.

Thank you all very much.
