You may have moved into your new flat or merely want to redecorate your bedroom because you want a new style. No matter your case, it is important to consider the space available when redecorating your bedroom with new furniture. If you do not consider the space at your disposal, you may risk falling over or stumbling into your closet when manoeuvring your way around the room.

Here are a few tips on how you can furnish your flat and utilise your bedroom space to create a functional and amazing room meant for your needs.

Make maximum use of your own space

In a small flat, you have to yourself, it is important to find one area in the bedroom you want to develop. There is not enough room for both the big bed, large closet, the giant desk, and a bookshelf. Obviously, the bed is the centrepiece of your bedroom, however, other types of furniture can play just as important a role depending on your needs and personality:

- For those of you who work from home, love games, or are students: You may need an office in your bedroom, so you can work, study, or play games. Your desk may take up a lot of space in the bedroom, as you may need space for two screens, a mouse, a keyboard, and more.
- For the person who loves clothes: To have enough space for your current and future clothes, you need a wardrobe that fits everything, thus the closet becomes very important in this room. Maybe you will need a wardrobe and clothes rail to display your favourite coats or to protect your shirts from wrinkles. A full body mirror may also be a detail to the room so that you can view your favourite clothes.

- For the collector: To store all your items, you may add a storage bench, shelf, and bookcases. This storage space could be for your souvenirs, your book collection, or to display some colourful flowers.

This way, you can have a bit of everything in the room while simultaneously prioritising the areas you need the most, thus creating a bedroom that functions well for you.

Get everything in one room

If you share a flat with a roommate, you may need to use your room as a dining area, office, sitting area, sleeping area, and storage area.

Making one room useful for all daily activities is not an easy task, however, it is possible with these tips:

- Combine the office and dining area: A way to maximise the function of your bedroom space is to use your furniture in multiple ways. Here you can have a study or work desk, which you can move to the centre of your bedroom and use as a dining area when people visit. Maybe you only have an office chair with your desk, but that one seat is not enough for you and your friends when you dine together. Thus, you can have two folding chairs ready behind your door, as they do not take up a lot of space. Additionally, you can use a wall mount folding table for two to save even more space.

- Use the bed as a sitting area: Another way to make use of your furniture in multiple ways is, for instance, by using a sofa sleeper. A sofa sleeper can be a bed for when you sleep, but it can also be a sofa for when your friends and family come over and you talk for hours. An alternative to the sofa sleeper is to create a cosy corner on your bed by getting a bedspread and some cushions. Thus, your bed becomes a sleeping area, a talking area and maybe an area for a movie night.

- Create space: To find storage, you need to be creative and use every nook and cranny of your bedroom. For instance, a good hack to store anything anywhere is by using storage boxes. This way, you can store items on top of your wardrobe, under your bed, and many more places. Only your imagination is the limit.

All the above tips can help you maximise the function of your bedroom space, so you do not need to leave the room for anything other than bathroom breaks.
