

Hay treble in SWPL monthly awards

Brogan Hay and Carrie McGorm collected the March 2022/23 Park's Motor Group, Scottish Women's Premier League (SWPL) Player of the Month awards.

Hay becomes the only SWPL player to ever win the award for a third time, the Scotland internationalist having previously won the award for August/September 2019 and April 2021.

The forward was voted by fellow clubs having scored three goals and provided one assist in March. This included the only goals in their 1-0 away win to Spartans and in their 1-1 draw with Celtic.

Rangers went unbeaten in March, winning three of their games before being denied all three points by a late equaliser at home to Celtic in their final game of the month.

In Park's Motor Group SWPL 2, Carrie McGorm won the honour for Stirling University making them the first team in the division to have won the award twice this season. Cyprus international, Anthina Varnava, won back in September.

McGorm got both goals in their 2-1 win over Gartcairn, including a spectacular eventual winner. She also provided an assist in their 2-2 draw with East Fife.

Results meant that Stirling University maintained their eight-point lead over East Fife in the battle to avoid automatic relegation.

The nominees award were Lauren Davidson (Glasgow City), Ciara Grant (Heart of Midlothian), and Shen Menglu (Celtic) and for the SWPL 2 award the nominees were Rebecca Cameron (St Johnstone) and Hannah Davie (Boroughmuir Thistle).