

Warrender is open to the public after refurbishment

Scotland's fourth oldest public swimming bath, Warrender Swim Centre, reopened its doors to the public on Tuesday having undergone a major refurbishment which began in 2020.

June Peebles, Chief Executive at Edinburgh Leisure said: "Edinburgh Leisure, in partnership with the City of Edinburgh Council, is delighted to be reopening the doors to Warrender Swim Centre, a Victorian pool loved by so many.

"We'd like to thank our customers for their patience during the somewhat longer than expected closure period. However, once inside the venue I'm sure everyone will agree it's been worth the wait.

"Originally known as Warrender Baths, the venue has been serving the community since 1887 and this major investment will ensure Warrender Swim Centre, as it is now known, will continue to serve the community for many years to come."

Join during the first week of Warrender's re-opening from 23 May to pay 'No Joining Fee' on your new membership. Additional member benefits can be enjoyed like priority bookings, free gym introduction and discounts on a range of activities. And unlike many other gyms, there is no contract and customers can freeze or cancel their membership at any time.

Edinburgh Leisure has different memberships that are flexible and affordable to fit around individuals/couples. Choose a Gym, Swim or Fitness Class package (not available at Warrender) at your local venue or sign up for Edinburgh Leisure's most popular Full Fitness membership giving unlimited access to all their venues across the city.
