

Hundreds of fans vote in women's awards

Four women, including three playing for clubs in the Lothians, have been nominated for the Kat Lindner Award for Outstanding Athletic and Academic Achievement, named after the former Glasgow City player who died suddenly in 2019, which honours a player who has excelled both on and off the field.

They are Hearts goalkeeper Charlotte Parker-Smith, Stenhousemuir's Eva Ralston, trainee paramedic Brogan Anderson of Livingston and Musselburgh Windsor youth coach Samantha Windram.

The awards are part of Scottish Women's Football shortlists for awards next month after supporters nominated throughout September. Now an all-women panel of judges will choose the winners of the ScottishPower SWF Awards to be announced on November 25 at Hampden Park, Glasgow.

Glasgow City's Lauren Davidson joins Rangers' Brogan Hay and Celtic's Caitlin Hayes on the SWPL1 Player of the Year shortlist, alongside former Rangers player Emma Watson, who signed for Manchester United in August.

Clubs shortlisted for the new ScottishPower Sustainable Club of the Year include Highlands & Islands double winners Buckie

Ladies, fast-growing youth team Busby Girls, far-travelling Shetland Girls and Dundee club Dryburgh Athletic.

Shortlists in the youth categories recognise success in the elite National Academy Programme as well as young players and coaches making their mark in the regional youth competitions and club sides.

Scottish Women's Football CEO, Aileen Campbell, said: "We had hundreds of nominations from across Scotland, highlighting some amazing stories of success, bravery and sportswomanship, sometimes against all odds. I have been struck too from accounts by team-mates by how many players across all the leagues don't realise the power they have as role models."
