

New Year is a sell out in Edinburgh

Tickets to Edinburgh's Hogmanay Street Party and Concert in the Gardens have now sold out.

Around 50,000 people are expected to bring in the New Year in the capital. The four-day celebration is organised by UniqueAssembly on behalf of The City of Edinburgh Council.

The festival, which celebrates its 30th anniversary this year, began on Friday 29 December with the return of the Torchlight

Procession for the first time since before the pandemic, and tonight Pulp will herald in the New Year with the final gig of 2023 and first of 2024 at the Concert in the Gardens.

Al Thomson Co-Director of UniqueAssembly said: “We’re in for one hell of a party now. 50,000 people in the streets of Edinburgh enjoying good music, good company, and one of the best fireworks displays in the world – there’s no better way to start the New Year. We started things off right with the Torchlight Procession on Friday, where we saw 20,000 people come together to shine a light on homelessness, raising money for our charity partner Social Bite; and this is just the perfect end to the year and the best way to celebrate 30 years of Edinburgh’s Hogmanay.”

There’s still a chance to take part in the celebrations with the final tickets for New Years Revels from 8.30pm tonight, the original indoor Hogmanay party at Assembly Rooms featuring an all-night ceilidh room and live band sing-a-long with Massaoke.

The party does not end at the bells as tomorrow there is a full day of free entertainment across the city on New Year’s Day. Family-friendly fun continues with Sprogmanay at the National Museum of Scotland and Assembly Roxy with from Sprog Rock, Magic Gareth, live ceilidhs and the very special Unicorn Dance Party.

First Footin’ will wrap up the four days of festivities – a free music and cultural trail showcasing a programme of live music throughout the city featuring performances from Lau, Bemz, Hot Chip, Kathryn Joseph and many more in venues such as St Giles’ Cathedral, Greyfriars Kirk, Virgin Hotel, and Assembly Rooms.
