

Review: Two Sisters □□□□□□

Seldom is there any justification for a play to have a running time of more than two hours 40 minutes, including an interval.

There are exceptions, of course.

At two hours 40 minutes, plus an interval, Two Sisters, the first original work from David Greig to be staged at the Lyceum since he took the reins as Artistic Director in 2015, is not one of those exceptions, although it really should be.

Lyceum Theatre, Edinburgh

Read the full review here

