

Free places at activity camp on offer thanks to Scotmid

Fully funded places for five 10-15 year olds are available at the first Scottish camp being held in West Lothian next month.

The Woodcraft Folks' Camps for All provides inclusive spaces where children and young people can connect to nature and grow in confidence. The camp takes place from 10 to 12 May at The Craig's Campsite.

Lauren Karstadt, Programme Manager for Woodcraft Folk, expressed her excitement, "We are looking forward to our first Scottish camp and are grateful to Scotmid for funding free places for local young people. Our events see young people come together, make friends, find common ground, and enjoy adventurous and fun activities. The events are beneficial for physical and mental health, being outdoors, socialising and learning new skills."

Kirsty Connell, Membership & Communities Manager (East) at Scotmid, said, "We're thrilled to support Woodcraft Folk's first camp in West Lothian. It presents a wonderful opportunity for young adventurers to learn new skills, build confidence, and create lasting memories."

Professionals working with young people who wish to inquire about free places are encouraged to email Woodcraft Folk direct lauren.karstadt@woodcraft.org.uk
