

Terminal V bigger and better than before

The tenth edition of Terminal V was bigger and better than ever with thousands attending the Royal Highland Showground over the weekend according to organisers.

Performances on the Hangar Stage were accompanied by a light show provided by 200 LED panels floating above the audience and reaching out into the Highland Hall.

Tickets are already on sale for next year's event.

As well as the "biggest and best in international electronic music, fans were graced with sets from some of the most exciting emerging local act across the day at The Lab, including Edinburgh's Mily B. Sub Club resident Liam Capello, and Frankie Elyse.
