

West End establishments offer “boutique luxury” after interior makeover

The Rutland Hotel, The Huxley and Kyloe have all had a makeover in a £1.2 million refurbishment programme which has just been completed.

These three hospitality venues are all owned by The Signature Group which has invested significantly in the hotel and adjacent bars and restaurants.

The hotel bedrooms have artwork inspired by some of Scotland's best known brands, Mulberry wallpaper and a bath butler package with Arran Aromatics products. The fully stocked bar cart includes products from Cold Town Beer, Edinburgh Gin and Johnnie Walker. A gym will be opened later this year.

The Huxley has a new menu which will be served in refreshed surroundings while Kyloe continues serving their established gourmet menu.

Louise MacLean, Business Development Manager for Signature Pubs, said: “Each detail throughout this refurbishment has been meticulously curated to ensure an unparalleled guest experience whether dining, drinking or dreaming. We want our guests to feel relaxed, at home, and to experience affordable Scottish luxury at every touch point. Whether that be through our expertly curated cocktail menus, gourmet dining, amenities from brands such as GHD and Nespresso, or our ‘bath butler’ package where you can have your bath run for you whilst you relax or dine, using Arran Aromatic products.

“Whilst these three venues stand alone in their offerings, character and design, they are united in their shared vision to deliver unforgettable experiences with top level Scottish hospitality in an iconic Edinburgh location providing a well-placed offer ideal for international tourists, corporate visitors and locals alike .”
