

Five things you need to know today

Our things to know about today include news of what is happening on the buses, in the arts world, in the window and in the country.

Summerhall on the market

Summerhall which is now an established arts venue in Edinburgh has been put up for sale by the trust which owns it and which has afforded its founder, Robert McDowell, the opportunity to develop what he says is Europe's biggest privately-funded arts centre over the last 13 years.

It is understood that Mr McDowell is connected to the Isle of Man trust which is now marketing the property for sale for a sum of around £10 million along with the existing 110+ tenancies generating income at present of around £1.1 million per annum. The leases will remain in place and obligations on landlord and tenants will necessarily form part of the sale.

Any purchaser would naturally look for options to redevelop and maximise any income from the two acre site, and the selling agents Cuthbert White have mentioned this in their sales schedule, but there would be the usual planning restrictions for any purchaser to deal with, as well as the rights of any existing tenants. Whether or not any such development comes to pass would be up to any purchaser.

Summerhall has a full programme of Fringe events this August which the management say will continue as planned. In response to some thoughts that the building might be used for student flats or a hotel, a petition has already been set up by Daniel Connell to keep Summerhall as it is.

It appears that Mr McDowell was reluctant to sell, but the trustees have decided and he has to go along with their decision. He said: "When much else in life is uncertain and filled with warring, when the healing balms of the arts are in highest demand, it is troubling for much-loved, dare I say famous, Summerhall to go through the property market wringer! Against my personal wishes, the decision was made to put the premises up for sale."

"My hope is that we come through this intact and able to continue as before, perhaps even better? We proved ourselves a valuable part of what makes Edinburgh a great city and fully international. We are honoured that there is so much love and support, let us hope for the best."

Read more here.

Pete Irvine – Scotland the Best book launch at Summerhall © 2024 The Edinburgh Reporter

Knitting in the window

At Scotland Shop at the weekend Rebekah McIntyre who works there was knitting in the window. She used her hands and arms as needles and was creating a large scale blanket which passers-by can see on display.

Rebekah has a degree in textile design from University of Dundee and simply wanted to bring the shop's knitwear to life while creating something of beauty.

Rebekah McIntyre, The Scotland Shop. © 2024 Martin McAdam

Rebekah McIntyre, The Scotland Shop. © 2024 Martin McAdam

Support The Edinburgh Reporter

Local independent news needs your support. Please subscribe to our monthly print issue here, book advertising for your business or make a donation. We would really appreciate it. Click on the front page below to find out more.

McVey mauling Councillor hits out at coalition stitch up Page 4	Shaggy dog tail Tey poodle Pepper back home at last Page 5	Fettes finale Former police HQ turns out at 50 Pages 12-13	Show stoppers Badden reviews May's best theatre shows Pages 16-18	Lothian at large Local sporting heroes in the spotlight Pages 20-21
---	--	--	---	---

the

EdinburghReporter

May 2024

EDINBURGH'S CAPITAL CITY

SPAPER...A CAPITAL READ FROM START TO FINISH

Trew gent

By GEORGE HAIN AND PHYLIS STEPHEN

HIS SELFLESS ACTS OF GENEROSITY raised more than £1 million for charities, and the late Tom Gilchrist, MBE, was much loved and well known in the capital.

Now, as Our Willie-themed statue, in the image of the late Scots war veteran and charity fundraiser, has been unveiled on the spot where he used to break his lunch during his long days spent in the city centre collecting cash for charities. The life-size sculpture, a replica of one auctioned during an 2019 fundraiser, is now in place outside Goodwin's Theatre on The Royal Mile which was his regular lunch spot. For more than 20 years Tom could be seen tugging his collecting tin, wearing his trademark tartan trousers and medals in the city centre.

Read more on page 7

Jupiter Artland

At Jupiter Artland there are two distinct and lovely exhibitions on this summer. We will be writing more about the artists about meeting them and seeing their work, but we have to share these photos below. If this sparks your curiosity then do go to Jupiter Artland (and they have a café and gift shop. There are more details here.

Andrew Sim

Andrew Sim's exploration of trees includes these yuccas created with pastel on canvas in Sim's biggest exhibition to date in Scotland. PHOTO The Edinburgh Reporter

Andrew Sim's exploration of trees includes this lovely Christmas trees in their biggest exhibition to date in Scotland. PHOTO The Edinburgh Reporter

Laura Aldridge's giant snail fountain PHOTO The Edinburgh Reporter

Laura Aldridge's giant snail fountain PHOTO The Edinburgh Reporter

Laura Aldridge and her giant snail fountain PHOTO The Edinburgh Reporter

Edinburgh Bus Users Group AGM – with David Begg

People with long memories will know that David Begg was in charge of transport in Edinburgh at one time. He made moves to rid the city centre – particularly Princes Street – of traffic. Now he is going to address the Edinburgh Bus Users Group (EBUG) AGM on 6 June.

Thursday 6 June 2024, 6pm Augustine United Church, George IV Bridge with Professor David Begg

Sign up to EBUG here.

Lothian bus on Princes Street PHOTO ©2023 The Edinburgh Reporter