

Six set for senior debuts as Scotland host Canada

Six players could earn their first senior international hockey caps as Scotland women face Canada in Glasgow this weekend with Watsonians, the domestic champions, and The University of Edinburgh, both with five players each in the squad.

The players in line for their debuts are Ellie Mackenzie (Loughborough University), Katie Swanson, Zara Kennedy (The University of Edinburgh), Watsonians pair, Amber Murray and Katherine Holdgate, plus England-based Rebecca Birch.

The first two matches against Canada are capped and they are on Saturday, May 25 (15:30) and Sunday, May 26 (14:30) with the other two games on Tuesday, May 28 (19:30) and Wednesday, May 29 (19:30).

Scotland last played Canada, who are ranked one place above the Scots at No 16 in the world rankings, at the Birmingham Commonwealth Games in 2022. The North American combine won 3-1 and claimed fifth spot at the tournament.

Chris Duncan, head coach to Scotland's women, said: "Canada are an excellent side who are playing in the Nations Cup so will be quality opposition.

"These games come at a great time in our programme after great tests against Spain and Wales and a really pleasing training phase.”

He added: “This group has six new caps, and we are thrilled for the individuals who will gain that honour of representing their country at senior level.

“However, we are pleased with the development of the whole group and have an immense volume of trust in the team selected to deliver our philosophy and style in these contests.”

Several of Scotland’s leading women players are still involved with Great Britain and are unavailable, but Duncan said: “This is a brilliant opportunity for others to lead the team which will be important for development towards our long-term goals.”

Meanwhile, Scotland under-21 women host Ireland in three matches against Ireland at the same venue as the Irish side continue to prepare for the under-21 EuroHockey Championship II in Konya, Turkey, in July.
