

At the Scottish Gallery – Andrea Geile

Andrea Geile's exhibition Amongst the Trees, at The Scottish Gallery on Dundas Street will celebrate the long-awaited turn of the seasons with the Summer Solstice on Thursday 20 June.

The exhibition is set up within The Scottish Gallery's gardens with Geile's man-made trees.

The trees are contrasted against the soft foliage and flora, and Geile's striking work evokes an industrial style, using Corten steel to create standing sculptures that are free to walk through and explore.

Hardened bronze steel interacts with the moving conditions to look at the relationship between the two environments when they are so often pressed together.

The exhibition runs until 27 July.

All photos courtesy of Brian Anderson

All photos courtesy of Brian Anderson