

Edinburgh to Levenmouth line open now

The Edinburgh to Levenmouth Trainline has opened to the public.

New train stations open in Leven and Cameron Bridge on 2 June, with rail services connecting customers with Edinburgh, Fife, and the Tay Cities.

The £116million Levenmouth Rail Link, which is being funded by The Scottish Government and delivered by Network Rail and ScotRail, will reconnect Leven and Cameron Bridge to Scotland's railway network for the first time in more than half a century.

The reopening of the railway is an exciting moment for local communities.

The reintroduction of the railway line will improve connectivity for local communities, providing greater access to education, entertainment, and employment.

All photos Thomas Haywood.

