

Toilet humour called for

A US comedian is calling for people to send her snaps of Edinburgh's best bathroom-wall graffiti for a musical show at the Festival Fringe next month.

New-York based Caitlin Cook's show The Writing on the Stall is made up of songs with lyrics from loos.

She wants people in Edinburgh to send her pictures of the best, funniest and most thought-provoking lines from capital cubicles to make up an original song for her Fringe show.

Cook, who has been photographing bathroom-wall graffiti for over a decade and performed all over the world, will bring her one-woman show to Edinburgh's The Pleasance from August 14-25.

People who contribute images chosen to be used in the song will be offered free tickets.

Pictures of bathroom-wall graffiti can be submitted to thewritingonthestallshow@gmail.com or sent by DM to @TheCaitlinCook on instagram.

SINCE WRITING ON TOILET WALLS IS DONE NEITHER FOR CRITICAL ACCLAIM, NOR
FINANCIAL REWARDS, IT
IS THE PUREST FORM
OF ART — DISCUSS.
