

Man 26 described by police as 'a danger to women' jailed for eight years

A man has been jailed for eight years for serious sexual offences in Edinburgh.

Connor Hagley, 26, pleaded guilty to the abuse, including rape, of a woman between 2019 and 2021 at the High Court in Edinburgh on Monday, 22 July, 2024.

He was sentenced at the High Court in Stirling yesterday, Tuesday, 27 August. He has also been placed on the Sex Offenders Register indefinitely.

Detective Inspector Keith Taylor said: "Hagley is a danger to women and his conviction proves that. He'll now face the consequences of his despicable actions, which have had a devastating impact on the woman involved.

"I'd like to commend her for her strength throughout the investigation and court proceedings. I hope this sentencing will bring some form of justice as she continues to move forward with her life.

"Anyone who has been a victim of such crimes is urged to come forward and report it to us. We're committed to fully investigating, regardless of when it happened, and bringing those responsible in front of the courts. I want to reassure you, we have specially trained officers and partner agencies who will support you throughout."