

Tartan is on the menu at LNER

LNER's First-Class menu is donning its tartan colours to celebrate the Edinburgh Fringe by serving Scottish delicacies on its most popular weekend services during August.

The special menu will be available from Friday to Monday on many Edinburgh services throughout the Fringe until 26 August.

A specially selected Haggis Sausage Roll complete with neeps and tatties, bacon and topped with oats and parsley is among the additions to the regular menu, along with a bite-sized sweet treat of Scottish tablet.

For customers travelling in Standard, favourites Irn Bru and Tunnock's Caramel Wafers will be available to purchase at the Café Bar or at seat service 'Let's Eat At Your Seat'.

LNER is committed to championing local food and drink producers along its 956-mile route, with suppliers handpicked for the quality of their produce as well as their responsible approach to production.

Richard Judge, Head of Customer Experience at LNER, said: "We're proud of the great destinations we serve and take great pride in our onboard menus and catering. We love to celebrate special events, like the Fringe, which will attract many thousands of people to Edinburgh. We look forward to welcoming visitors onboard and hope they enjoy our special menu, which will be served on our most popular weekend trains during August."
