

Applications open for new Scottish junior sea fishing chief

Scotland's sea fishing bosses are looking for a new junior shore angling team manager after Lindsay Wilson and Douglas Barclay decided to step down.

Mike Horn, president of the Scottish Federation of Sea Anglers (SFSA), praised the duo for their contribution and said: "For the many years, they have managed the junior team and looked after our young anglers.

"Lindsay and Douglas have done everything from collecting the juniors for practice sessions, coaching, arranging mini buses for the Home Nations and, especially, fund raising which has been never ending. They are a hard act for anyone to follow.

"So, the role of junior manager, applicants will have to demonstrate a willingness to work with under-16's and the position requires a commitment to train as a qualified coach and then attend the ongoing CPD as required. This is essential to cover child protection, equity and equality."

Applicants will need to demonstrate the angling ability/experience required to coach at this level and understand that the role is a lot more than just fishing, with involvement in selection, development, procedures and guidance. Fundraising is critical as is interaction with parents around travel and health.

Applications should be made in writing to SFSA, 5 Viewforth Gardens. Kirkcaldy. Fife. KY1 3DG.

PICTURE: Fishing on Kirkcaldy Beach during the Iain Reid Memorial Match. Picture Nigel Duncan

FOCUS: Mike Horn fishing on Kirkcaldy Beach during a match. Picture Nigel Duncan