

Buzzworks open another restaurant in Edinburgh area

Buzzworks is branching out to Musselburgh where they will open a new place to go and eat on the High Street. And the company is now recruiting for staff – both front of house and in the kitchens.

The company which owns Scotts and Thirty Knots in South Queensferry and Herringbone in town says it offers an “aspirational dining and entertainment experience across Scotland”.

Lido will offer continental café life in Musselburgh with food and drinks available all day. The new restaurant is designed by interior designer, Jim Hamilton, with space for around 120 people. The open kitchen features a custom made pizza oven imported from Italy, and there will be a semi private dining room.

Kenny Blair, Managing Director of Buzzworks said: “We are absolutely delighted to announce the opening of Lido Musselburgh, our 21st venue, and we’re excited to bring the vibrant Lido experience to the town.

“Our vision is to create a welcoming space where people can come together to enjoy Lido’s signature blend of delicious food and drinks in a relaxed, stylish setting – all offering fantastic value for money.

“Musselburgh is a fantastic town with a strong sense of community, and we're thrilled to offer a destination that everyone can enjoy and take pride in—whether it's for a casual coffee, a family meal, or a special celebration with friends.

“We're looking forward to opening this winter and joining the Musselburgh community. As we prepare, our goal is to become a welcoming spot in town with a menu and atmosphere that everyone can enjoy. We can't wait to meet our new neighbours and be a part of the local scene.”
