

Construction underway building homes at Shawfair

One of Lothian's independent housebuilders has begun construction on a 59-home site which had previously been left in limbo.

Construction company Dundas took on the residential development in Shawfair, which had started construction under developer Stewart Milne before the collapse of the Aberdeen based builder.

After acquiring the site earlier in the summer, Dundas is now setting out to fulfil its promise to deliver quality housing to the area.

Craig Fairfoull, Sales & Marketing Director at Dundas, said: "We currently have a walk-through plot on site, so that keen buyers can come along and get a taste for the development themselves.

"Along with this, we're excited to be opening a new sales office on site, which will be coming soon.

"We recognise the significance of this project and are dedicated to addressing all concerns thoroughly before commencing construction. We are unwavering in our commitment to maintaining high-quality standards."

The Shawfair development will offer a variety of homes ranging from three to six bedrooms and is located just six miles south of Edinburgh.

As a new neighbourhood on the edge of the city, Shawfair offers a mix of local retail and community health facilities, as well as 3km of cycle paths that easily connect homeowners to the train station, schools and Park & Ride.

Dundas is a multiple award-winning independent homebuilder in Scotland. It focuses on crafting homes that enhance the well-being of its valued customers and making the home-buying experience simpler, more enriching, and enjoyable.

<https://bit.ly/dundas-estates>

Nairn style home