

New York-inspired cocktail bar to open in Edinburgh this autumn

This October, New York-inspired cocktail bar Manahatta is set to bring a taste of the Big Apple to Edinburgh. The bar on Rose Street will make its Scottish debut, offering guests the New York vibe right in the heart of the city.

Set to officially open on Saturday 26 October, this new city centre hotspot promises to bring “big city buzz” and a new level of excitement to Edinburgh’s lively nightlife scene.

The new location will have two floors (ground level and basement) and a “dynamic and stylish setting” for guests to enjoy. Both floors boast impressive art-deco-inspired arched back bars and bold lighting that channels the essence of New York streets. A stunning mirrored disco ball, reminiscent of Times Square’s famous ball drop, adds a touch of glamour. There is an elevated DJ booth looks over the sprawling dancefloor – setting the perfect scene for chic gatherings and parties.

There is a packed events calendar and entertainment lineup. The new Edinburgh location will launch with the brand’s popular ‘LIVE & LOUD Piano Night’ taking place every Thursday. Guests will be able to enjoy live music performances and get involved in the fun by sharing their musical requests – creating an upbeat atmosphere that’s perfect for dancing the night away.
