

SWF appoint a new legal partner

Morton Fraser MacRoberts (MFMac), one of Scotland's Big Four independent law firms, has become the Official Legal Partner of Scottish Women's Football (SWF) for the next three years.

In the role, MFMac will provide legal advice to SWF on a range of matters.

Jenny Dickson, Chair of MFMac, said: "Over the past two years working with Scottish Women's Football, we've come to understand the unique challenges female players face in the sport.

"These experiences have deepened our commitment to women's football in Scotland. We're honoured to partner with SWF and look forward to actively contributing to further advancements for women across the country."

Scottish Women's Football CEO, Aileen Campbell, said: "We're delighted to welcome MFMac as our Official Legal Partner. Over the years, we've seen firsthand the challenges faced by female players, and having their legal expertise on board will be invaluable in addressing these issues.

"As women's football continues to grow and attract more commercial interest, having the sectoral legal expertise of MFMac in our corner will be invaluable. We're eager to see the positive impact of this partnership and are excited about the new opportunities it will bring for players, clubs, and the entire football community.”
