

Pizza Hut revived in Stockbridge

In good news for pizza lovers Pizza Hut has opened again at 132 Raeburn Place .

The shop was formerly Pizza Hut but operated under a different franchise group.

The new Hut is operated by Fife-based conglomerate Glenshire Group and becomes the 22nd store in their growing portfolio.

The store offers delivery and collection services, while also offering a small seating area for those who want to eat on the go.

The team of 20 includes a store manager, three shift managers, three team members, and a team of drivers.

Director Zibby Ghafoor said the team are thrilled to be opening in the town.

He said: "We've been in talks about bringing Pizza Hut back to Stockbridge for some time after the previous franchise closed the unit.

"We're bringing a fresh approach to site, with an updated look and feel, new menu, and new equipment.

"This is a great location and we have a lot of people to serve.

"It's part of an expansion across Scotland and England.

"December is usually a really busy month for the brand so we're really excited to get going."

Area Manager Tom Chiemelewski said: "We're committed to delivering quality, variety, and exceptional service, and we can't wait to welcome everyone in for their favourite pizzas, sides, and desserts."

"This opening marks another step in our journey to serve more of Scotland, and we're grateful to the Stockbridge community for their support."

The franchisee hopes this opening will create around 20 jobs.
