

Hibs striker Kathleen McGovern picks up prestigious award

Hibs striker Kathleen McGovern has been named the December 2024/25 ScottishPower Women's Premier League Player of the Month.

The 22-year-old is the second Hibs player to pick up the award this season, with winger Abbie Ferguson collecting her first SWPL Player of the Month award back in August.

The well-deserved recognition comes after the number 10 scored three goals in two league appearances throughout December 2024.

"I'm delighted. It's a good personal achievement for myself," McGovern told HibsTV.

"But I could not have done it without my teammates. They push me on every day and there were good results in December. I'm just delighted for myself.

"[The Rangers win] was a great result for the team and to get the three points was the most important thing. We just have to keep driving forward."

A huge week continues for Hibernian Women, as our 6-0 home win over Spartans is promptly followed up by a midweek away trip to face Dundee United and a Sky Sports Cup Semi Final versus Aberdeen at Meadowbank on Sunday.

"I think we are flying at the moment and high in confidence.

It was a really good December for the team, some big results in there. We just have to keep pushing now into the second half of the season.

“I feel like we’ve come back from the break flying. It was good result [versus Spartans]. We just need to continue that because it’s a big week for everyone. To get to a cup final is the aim, and ambition, of the team.

“The supporters always play their part. We always hear them on the pitch. We need as many of them as possible for this big week, and big month, ahead.

“We thank them again and hopefully [our good form] can continue.”

This means that Hibs hold three prestigious awards with David Gray being named Manager of the Month and Nicky Cadden male Player of the Month for December 2024.
