BOTB is a reputable online competition platform with thousands of five-star reviews on TrustPilot, Feefo, and millions of followers across many social media channels. In short, this is not something that can be ignored at first glance.

BOTB does not refer to something random. It is a legitimate competition that involves judges, just like in other competitions. Each prize determines how expensive the ticket to be purchased is, and every player is required to have a specific strategy and awareness. Their chances of winning depend on how well they play.

The chances of winning at BOTB are also determined by how good your opponents are. Essentially, this is a type of online skill game, where a person's chances of hitting a target in a dart game are determined by the odds of that person and their opponents. The odds can be improved by purchasing more tickets, and this can be viewed as an investment.

In general, it's about selecting a point closest to the correct coordinates, and the odds can be very small. However, with keen observation of the area where the ball might clearly appear in the image, your task will become easier. If you train yourself enough to determine the area where the ball is centered, you can significantly improve your chances.

BOTB is about a game that primarily requires skills related to visualization and calculation to determine the correct coordinates. Essentially, players need to narrow down the area where the ball may be located, and the "results" are determined by what other players achieve.

However, BOTB remains a fair online competition, and although it has been explained that buying more tickets increases your chances of winning, the organizers maintain the "fun of playing" by limiting the number of tickets that can be purchased for a single game. Last year's update ensured that the maximum number of tickets a person could purchase was 75.

BOTB has also increased the variety of prizes by offering prizes other than cars. In this context, the prizes offered can also include houses, so if you want to play for a chance to win a house, that is possible.

In the end, BOTB is just like other online ticketed competitions that demand certain experience and abilities from players. The difference is that this platform has proven to truly pay out and is far from any fraudulent elements.
