

Edinburgh care home invites locals to join its pasta festival

A new festival is coming to an Edinburgh care home – and it's all about celebrating cultural diversity through food.

On Wednesday 26 February, from 1.30pm-3pm, Care UK's Cairdean House, on Redford Road, will get everyone's mouths watering as it opens its doors to the local community for its new international food festival.

Guests are invited to enjoy different cuisines from countries all around the world, with food prepared by the home's Head Chef.

From pasta to curry and burgers to burritos, the festival will include something to tickle all taste buds. Once everyone has had their fill, there will be entertainment to enjoy by Margo Butterfly music in the café.

Taylor Baker, Deputy Manager at Cairdean House, said: "We're delighted to be welcoming the local community to join our first ever food festival here at Cairdean House.

“We love to celebrate the cultural diversity of our team and the Cairdean House residents. Food goes beyond nourishment – it embodies the rich tapestry of cultural identity and heritage worldwide and is at the centre of countless traditions and celebrations.

“This is the perfect opportunity to get together with loved ones and enjoy a celebration of the world’s best cuisine. Many residents at Cairdean House are keen cooks and have attended several food festivals in the past, so this event will encourage them to look back and relive their time spent in the kitchen, cooking up a treat.”
