

Interview: Toyah Willcox returns to Edinburgh Playhouse! Now that's what I call an Eighties' icon...

"I'm not going to tell you," laughs Toyah Willcox, her face beaming, "because it's a big impact moment that works really, really well..."

It's 25 years since I first interviewed the effervescent Eighties' punk princess, and more than I care to remember since I first listened to her music.

Tracks like Ieya, Danced and It's A Mystery were a huge part of my youth, along with the songs of the Pet Shop Boys and hits of Meatloaf, all of which is fitting as today, via Zoom, we are talking Now That's

What I Call A Musical, the 80's jukebox musical in which the Birmingham-born singer makes a special, one week only, guest appearance during its Edinburgh run.

Continue reading here...

