

Dynamic Earth offers a new year round pass

Annual Pass will allow visitors more access to science

Dynamic Earth, the Science Centre and Planetarium in Edinburgh is changing the way visitors access its facilities with the introduction of a new year-round Annual Pass.

Visitors can now enjoy unlimited access for twelve months after buying just one ticket, making science education more inclusive and accessible than before.

In its 25th anniversary year, Dynamic Earth is reinforcing its position as a must-visit national attraction by ensuring families, residents, and visitors can explore science in fresh and exciting ways throughout the year providing unparalleled value for money.

Dynamic Earth has announced the move as part of its 10-year strategy, improving accessibility to science education and ensuring visitors can regularly enjoy the immersive galleries, seasonal programming, and a continually changing Planetarium schedule.

From Easter and Halloween trails to an enchanting Santa's Grotto, as well as new screenings under the stars in Edinburgh's only Planetarium. There is even more to explore at Dynamic Earth.

Mark Bishop, CEO of Dynamic Earth, said: "In our 25th anniversary year, we have our eye on how we can give everyone even more to enjoy in the years ahead. Our new approach to ticketing means science can become an even more regular activity for families. Pay once, visit as often as you like—our doors are open, and we're waiting to welcome you in our ever-evolving programme!"

Dynamic Earth continues to lead the way in making science education more engaging, inclusive, and accessible. With this new model, it cements its role as Edinburgh's Science Centre and Planetarium, reaffirming its mission to inspire curiosity and discovery.
