

Fearnley into main draw in Miami

Edinburgh's Jacob Fearnley has clinched a place in the main draw for one of the world's biggest tennis tournaments outside the Grand Slam events.

Courtesy of a 6-2, 6-4 win over Tristan Boyer the Scot will join Jack Draper and Cam Norrie in keeping the flag flying for British tennis at an event won twice by Andy Murray.

Boyer, like Fearnley a product of the American college system, took the court ranked 26 places below his 83rd ranked opponent whose recent experience of a winning Davis Cup debut must have stood him in good stead.

Half a dozen double faults must have been of some concern to Fearnley but this was compensated by the number of points won overall on serve.

Among the stars competing in Miami are Carlos Alcatraz, Novak Djokovic, Stefanos Tsitsipas and Alexander Zverev who ended Jacob's run at the Australian Open third round stage.
